Discover proven techniques to give your presentations more substance, style, and credibility. Participants will learn how to handle nervousness, obtain and hold people’s interest, and confidently field questions.

Participants will build confidence in a non-threatening environment. They won’t be pushed to get up and talk. However, they will have the opportunity to practice their new speaking skills in front of small groups of their peers.

The facilitator will be Gary Butterworth, M.A., teacher, trainer, and performer from Fred Pryor Seminars. Key learning points include, but are not limited to, the following:

- How to choose material that will deliver the message to the target audience.
- How to present information in an interesting and compelling manner.
- Vocal techniques that add to one’s effectiveness and those that detract from it.
- How to create and use powerful visual aids.
- How to field questions with confidence.
